ROOSEVELT IN CONTROL MISSOURI CONVENTION AFTER STUBBORN FIGHT

At Early Hour This (Friday) Governor Hadley Takes Gavel as Permanent Chairman—Of 13 Contesting County
Delegations Eight Will Be Seated by Progressives, One
by Taft Forces, and Four Will Be Divided.
Opening Delayed 12 Hours

CONVENTION HALL, St. Louis, April 26.—(Friday)—Governor Hadley took the gavel as permanent chairman of the Missouri Republican state convention at an early hour this morning and the Roosevelt forces took control of the convention from the Taft leaders who had fought stubbornly.

The credentials committee, dominated by Roosevelt men, recommended that out of 13 contesting county delegations eight Roosevelt delegations be seated, one Taft delegation be seated and in the remaining four counties that both Taft and Roosevelt delegations be seated with a half vote to each delegate.

The report was adopted giving the Roosevelt forces control. Inability of the various committees to come to agreements so that they could report delayed the opening of the convention until 9 o'clock last night. Delegates assembled in the morning several hours before that time and waited patiently for the call to order. Mayor Frederick H. Kriesmann of St. Louis acted as temporary chairman and the first few minutes after the opening was orderly. Then the fight, which had driven things since 6 o'clock in the morning, was resumed and continued for hours despite the protest from delegates.

Prepare for All-Night Session. It was evident that the fight was to be a long-drawn-out affair and the delegates settled down for an all-night session after midnight when the committee had failed to report back to the convention. In the meantime the struggle between leaders continued. At last Governor Hadley and other Roosevelt leaders expressed confidence in holding final control.

The progressive forces met their most formidable opposition at a late hour last night when they attempted to force the Taft managers to accept a minority of the delegates-at-large from Missouri to the Republican national convention.

Prior to the assembling in the arena the final conference between the Roosevelt and Taft factions was held. The conference committee was composed of three Taft men and Secretary of Commerce and Labor Charles S. Nelson and three Roosevelt followers, and Governor Hadley.

Back to Credentials Committee. The subcommittee on contests reported that it was unable to agree on any of the contested counties, and returned them back to the full committee, which, in turn, referred the contests to the credentials committee. Jackson county, with 90 delegates, and Buchanan, with 25, were included in the contests reported to the credentials committee.

Refused to Compromise. Early yesterday morning, Governor Hadley, leader of the Roosevelt faction, refused to consider a compromise to end the party row. The compromise presented by the St. Louis city committee was that Governor Hadley, as Mayor F. H. Kriesmann of St. Louis, a Taft adherent, be named as one delegate-at-large, the other two to be chosen in some manner to be agreed upon, one to be a Taft man and the other a Roosevelt supporter. This was rejected by the Roosevelt forces.

New Witnesses Subpoenaed in Effort to Learn Why Aid Not Offered Titanic

WASHINGTON, April 25.—To learn why a nearby steamer did not offer to the sinking Titanic, and to fix the blame for the loss, the Senate today subpoenaed three important witnesses.

They are: H. H. Moore, captain of the steamer Mount Temple, which passed within a short distance of the Titanic when she was in extreme distress, and the captain and wireless operator of the Californian, which sent the warning. All will be put on the stand tomorrow.

Witnesses were issued for the master and operator of the Californian, while announcement that Captain Moore would appear was contained in a telegram from Acting Premier Foster of Canada. Captain Moore's story probably will be heard first, for his ship is due to sail from St. John, N. B., late Saturday.

New Method of Examining. A new method of examining the members of the crew of the Titanic has been adopted to insure greater accuracy. The men are anxious to return to their homes in England. Accordingly, each member of the committee today undertook the examination of a group with the intention of releasing such as had nothing of importance to tell the committee. The

MAJOR ARTHUR PEUCHEN AND HIS FAMILY.

All of whom were saved from the Titanic. Major Peuchen is an officer of the Queen's Rifles, of Toronto, Canada, and owes his life to the fact that he was given a place in one of the lifeboats full of women and children because he was an expert marksman. He bears a stained statement from Second Officer Lightbody of the Titanic sustaining this fact and adding a compliment to the major's heroism. This little piece of torn paper, on which the statement was written while in the lifeboat, is called by the major his "certificate of life." Taft Spends Day "Wrenching Soul" By Attacking Roosevelt

BOSTON, April 25.—President Taft donned his fighting clothes today, abandoned his policy of silence under the attacks that Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has made upon him, and upon his administration and for the first time since Mr. Roosevelt announced his candidacy, launched into a bitter denunciation of the former president.

From the time Mr. Taft entered Massachusetts and made his first speech at Springfield, shortly after noon, until late tonight, he hammered away at Colonel Roosevelt. The president made close to a dozen speeches, many of them extended, the rest only a few words in length.

In all he made it clear that he is unalterably opposed to Mr. Roosevelt, that he saw disaster in a third term in the White house for any man, and that he did not believe Colonel Roosevelt had given him a "square deal."

He spoke to good-sized crowds in all the cities where he made set speeches, and at the towns and villages where his train stopped briefly, the people flocked around his private car, and listened with close attention.

The president spoke at Springfield and Falmouth, twice in Worcester, and at North, South Framingham and several smaller towns. In the morning he seemed to utter his attack on Colonel Roosevelt with reluctance. "This wrenches my soul," he said once.

Soul Wrenches Less, Sovereign. As the day wore on, however, and he made speeches, his speech in which he denounced Mr. Roosevelt again and again, Mr. Taft grew more aggressive in manner, emphasizing his words with gestures and apparently said with a feeling of regret he may have left at this evidence that the long friendship with his former chief was broken.

His principal Boston address was delivered in the Arena to a large crowd, but before returning to his private car he spoke briefly to an "overflow" meeting in Symphony hall. His speech in the Arena was delivered from manuscript, prepared in the last few days in Washington, carefully gone over by members of his cabinet, and containing a detailed answer to many of Mr. Roosevelt's charges.

Now that the date of the Democratic state convention is drawing near, requests for reservations at the various hotels in the city are becoming more and more numerous, and the vanguard of the Democratic leaders is expected to arrive tomorrow afternoon.

By Sunday evening leaders from all parts of the state will be here, and the lobby of the Antlers hotel, which will be made the convention headquarters, will present a busy appearance. Many of the county delegations are expected Sunday afternoon, and caucuses and meetings to the number of 25 or 30 will be held Sunday afternoon and continue throughout the night up until the convention is called Monday morning. The county delegations will begin to arrive Sunday noon, and will continue to come in until early Monday morning.

Thomas J. McVie, the Speer machine candidate for national committeeman, will arrive from Denver Sunday morning, as will E. E. Street of Arapahoe county, former Governor Charles S. Thomas and others.

Charles W. Franklin of Denver is expected to arrive Sunday afternoon. He is the Progressive candidate for national committeeman, and is a member of the executive committee of the Colorado Federation of the National Federation of Democratic clubs.

Former Governor Alva Adams and his brother, Frank Adams, both prominent politicians of Pueblo, also will arrive Sunday afternoon. Ex-Governor Adams is scheduled to speak at the dinner to be given by the Democrats at the Antlers Sunday night.

Other Leaders Coming. Among other prominent Progressive Democrats who will arrive here Sunday are Henry M. Tabor, Denver; Thomas Rainey, Leadville; Senator Jack Crowley, Rocky Ford; T. J. O'Donnell, Denver; Mrs. Helen Grenfell, Denver; Senator John T. Jovan, Silverton; Senator John J. Toban, Montrose; Senator John A. Cross, Loveland; T. M. Patterson, Denver; Henry

The president said that his speech tonight was one of the most painful duties of his life, that it was in response to an obligation owed the Republican party which selected him as its candidate and to the American people who elected him president.

Must Lay Aside Rules of Propriety. "It goes," he said, "out of a phase of national politics and national life that I believe to be unprecedented in our history. So unusual is the exigency that the ordinary rules of propriety that limit and restrict a president in his public addresses must be laid aside and the cold, naked truth must be stated in such a way that it shall be a warning to the people of the United States."

Mr. Taft said that Colonel Roosevelt's Columbus speech, accepted as his platform, "sent a thrill of alarm through all the members of the community."

Mr. Roosevelt, he said, then found that if the nomination were to come

Street Car Jumps Track; Severed Are Badly Shaken Up

A northbound canal car jumped the track this side of Station park about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and smashed against a telephone pole, cutting it off. Motorman Charles Shockey was badly bruised and was cut by broken glass. He was taken to his home, 126 East Rio Grande street.

The car ran for 50 feet on the ties before it hit the pole and conductor Ephraim Smith and a number of passengers were badly shaken up. Motorman Shockey stuck to his post and applied both the air and the hand brakes. Had he not done so, the car would probably have tipped over, with serious results to some of the passengers. It is not known what caused the car to jump the track. It is said to have been running at a comparatively low rate of speed.

Curious Will Be Barred From Wharf When Ship Carrying Dead Arrives

HALIFAX, N. S., April 25.—To prevent the crush of a morbidly curious crowd, the militia department has agreed to a request that the cable ship Mackay-Bennett, on its arrival here with its dead, may dock at the gun wharf.

This is the most carefully guarded military property in the city and no visitors are allowed within its precincts unless their business is made known to the sentry. Only such as seek admission for the purpose of identification of the dead will be allowed within the limits of the property.

Up to midnight the local officers of the White Star company had not received word of the Mackay-Bennett starting for Halifax. It is thought, however, that the ship is now on her way and if not delayed should reach here by Saturday night.

Incoming Steamer Wrecks Dock and Sinks Another Vessel at Seattle, Wash.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 25.—The steamer Alameda crashed into a dock while coming into her berth tonight. Several people were knocked into the water, but were rescued.

The Alameda struck the pier 300 feet from the end and ploughed through, sinking the sound steamer Telegraph, which lay at her moorings on the other side. The seaward end of the dock fell into the water and the dock of the Alameda was covered with wreckage.

New Crew for Olympic

SOUTHAMPTON, April 25.—The White Star officials said late tonight that a new crew had been shipped without recourse to the strikers, and that the Olympic probably would sail at daylight.

The strikers were satisfied today of the seaworthiness of the boats by a practical demonstration, but then demanded the firemen who had remained aboard when the strikers quit the ship, be dismissed. This the company refused to do.

REPORT ABOUT TRAIN BLOWN SUPPRESSION FROM TRACK NONSENSE BY WIND

OSTLER BAY, April 25.—The talk about the suppression of the report of a statement setting forth his conversation with the Harvester company, said Colonel Roosevelt tonight in a statement setting forth his conversation with the Harvester company, said Colonel Roosevelt tonight in a statement setting forth his conversation with the Harvester company.

Colonel Roosevelt asserted that at a meeting with his cabinet, at which Mr. Taft was present, it was decided that the Harvester company be instructed to complete its investigation of the Harvester company before any suit was instituted, following the usual course of procedure in such cases. Mr. Taft, he added, concurred in this decision.

During the rest of his administration, a period of a year and a half, the colonel said, the commissioner of corporations was unable to complete his investigation. He said that in the three years of his present administration, Mr. Taft at any time could have ordered the attorney general to bring suit against the Harvester company, or could have requested the commissioner of corporations to hasten his investigation, but that Mr. Taft had taken no action, except that now taken five days before the Massachusetts primary.

Really Helped Taft. Colonel Roosevelt also said that when the Northern Securities suit was brought against the Morgan interests in 1904, he was expected to run for president, but that while the Harvester company matter came up in 1907, he knew he would not be a candidate the following year, so that if the action taken in this case did secure the good will of any of the Morgan interests for anybody, it secured their good will for Mr. Taft.

Colonel Roosevelt spent most of the afternoon in preparing his statement. "I have just begun to fight," he said early in the day. He received reports this afternoon of President Taft's criticism of him in his speech at Springfield, Mass., but declined to comment upon it, saying he would make his reply in his speeches in Massachusetts.

The statement of Colonel Roosevelt, in part, follows: As regards the Harvester matter, the following statement sent to me by Mr. Bonaparte, my attorney general, at the time, and Mr. Herbert Knox Smith then, as now, commissioner of corporations, explaining themselves.

When I became attorney general I found a number of complaints on file about the Harvester trust, and some of these were so serious and specific that I directed an investigation, appointing B. D. Townsend, then assistant United States attorney in one of the Dakota territories, as special counsel for the subject. He worked very slowly, and while we were awaiting his report I received information from other quarters, and also an elaborate brief and argument, both of which I have read, and which I have used in defense of the trust, and made up my mind that suit ought to be brought for its dissolution.

Then Learned of Investigation. If I then learned from Herbert Knox Smith that he was engaged in an investigation of the affairs of the Harvester trust directed by the special counsel, a resolution, I think, by Senator (Hatch) of Utah, to call for a report on the Harvester trust, and I have since then, I think, been waiting for a report on the Harvester trust, and I have since then, I think, been waiting for a report on the Harvester trust.

At Omaha, Okla., a severe storm of rain and hail, and a strong wind, struck the city, and a number of persons were killed, and a number of persons were killed, and a number of persons were killed.

A fourth tornado, passed through Arkansas City and Winfield, destroying a number of houses, and a number of persons were killed, and a number of persons were killed, and a number of persons were killed.

It is reported that the old Bureau Cross, Okla., two miles north of the city, was completely destroyed by a tornado which swept through the city. Only a few dwellings remained. It is not known whether any loss of life occurred.

At Gueda, Springs, it is stated that nearly five inches of water fell in less than an hour. The big lake is spread all over the low ground, but it is thought the concrete dam will withstand the strain.

Prominent Men Address Press Banquet by Means of Long Distance Telephone

NEW YORK, April 25.—Representative Journalists from all over the country were brought together tonight at the annual banquet of the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers association, held in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

The surrounding galleries and boxes were filled with many ladies in handsome evening costumes.

It was between the courses of the banquet that the novel feature was introduced. Liveable stars from the orchestra started the band playing. The announcement shortly afterward from Congressman Victor Murdock, editor of the Wichita Eagle, who acted as toastmaster, that the voice of President Taft and Premier Borden would be heard at such great distances as separated the speakers from the diners was greeted with enthusiastic applause.

And set the guests to examining the apparatus supplied for accomplishing this feat. Underneath each table was a watch case received supplied by the Western Electric company with connections with the long distance wires and also with the local wires of the New York Telephone company.

First there came over the wires the voice of Al. Jolson singing a rousing melody, "Fiddle Upon Your Violin." The diners were next connected with Premier Borden. He dwelt on the responsibility and opportunities of the uncorrupted press and expressed the hope that Great Britain and America

PITIFUL STORY OF MEXICAN CRUELTY

Two Americans Abused, Insulted and Starved in Filthy Prison at Chihuahua

NO CHARGE AGAINST THEM

Were Seeking Work in Lumber Camp U. S. Consul Gets Them Liberated

EL PASO, Tex., April 25.—After 36 days in the "unspeakable filth" of the penitentiary at Chihuahua abused, insulted and starved, although there was no charge against them, T. K. Barton of Marlin, Tex., and John Anderson of Boston, Mass., arrived here tonight having been liberated at Chihuahua last night through the efforts of United States Consul Marion Letcher. Although Barton, like Anderson, had had but a bite of bread in 24 hours, starvation had food and confinement had reduced him to such a condition that he was unable to touch food when the most tempting viands that El Paso affords were offered him by sympathizing patrolmen at the police station. Anderson, who is but 25 years of age and 10 years younger than his fellow sufferer, however, demolished steak and bread and eggs with the greatest vigor.

They bore full evidence of the ordeal through which they had passed. Barton lost 25 pounds and Anderson about 20 in confinement. They had sold their clothes to get a little food, and arrived here in indescribable tatters. Barton wore a handmade cap fashioned and sewed by himself, that was a caricature of masculine headgear and their hair hung over their eyes.

In Solitary Confinement. Both spent five days in solitary confinement. Barton was the first in whom this sentence was passed. During this time he was given neither food nor water. Anderson soon after suffered the same fate. In their cell there was a little window, but sharp-edged spikes projected inward, keeping them in perpetual gloom, and much to the boys' dislike. Phases of the torture the sufferer who thus isolated himself, reported to the U. S. consul.

The men were imprisoned on the 10th of March, 1912, when they had been in the lumber camp at San Pedro de Madera. Both were well clothed and had money. They had no idea Chihuahua was a city when they were arrested. No charge was ever placed against them, but they were informed that they were to stay in prison 30 days.

Just for being Americans, U. S. consul remarked that he was all at sea with the Mexicans. He was shortly left to find that this was the case. After time he demanded a trial, but was given no satisfaction. Barton was in a bit of a quandary when he was told that he was to be released. He was able to call through a window to a man passing, whom he told for an American to take a note to Mr. Letcher. The man paid no attention to the request.

The Americans received various courtesies in the penitentiary, and at times shared with a half-breed with an American name.

Half Breed Prevents Escape

They had given up hope of liberation. Finally secured a pointed piece of wood about 10 inches in length. With this they went to work under the window and dug out the adobe until the stone floor on the outside was reached. This work required only one night. The next night they planned to remove a few stones and escape. The half-breed, however, carried the news to the commandante of the prison. The Americans, Barton first and Anderson the next day, were placed in solitary confinement.

A man whom Barton knew as Smith and who said he was held on authority of the United States because he resembled the description of some real outlaw, was the means of getting the news. Then he pointed to a small hole in the wall, which he said he had made. He said that he would not resist execution and he finally carried a note to the U. S. consul in the United States consular office.

Let me tell you that the first day I was released, when Mr. Letcher came to see me, I was a little thingy. I was weak and I was hungry. I was asked to eat a little of the food that was given me. I was asked to eat a little of the food that was given me.

I am up to the ears in work the consul said, but you boys will be out of here as soon as I can arrange it. He gave us seven pesos and sent us some magazines, which made the last five days of our imprisonment easier. It took him that long to get us released. But this wasn't anything to us, something else he gave us. It was a good, genuine, home-made American bread.

High Opinion of Citizenship.

After beans once a day or a hunk of Mexican barley bread, you may imagine how that looked to us. It was white and firm but light and crusty. We wanted to cry it looked so much like freedom to us and it made us think of our homes, too.

It cropped out in the course of Barton's narrative that he has a high opinion of American citizenship.

"Did they beat you or abuse you?" he was asked.

"You bet they didn't. I told them I was an American and there was no charge against me, and when they tried to haul me about I shook them off and stood on my heels. They called us the names right along, and once I lost my temper. The guard who tried it was particularly nasty, and I had him by the throat and was choking the life out of him when another guard grabbed a club and others managed to get extra food. I am something of an athlete, he said in a matter of fact tone, and I went through exercises to show the development and movements of the body. Sometimes I would take a jump of the lighter prisoners, one in each hand and hold them up at arms length. The crowd always applauded, and we got many an extra tortilla that way.

It was not until Consul Letcher had appeared that the Americans were allowed the freedom of the bull pen, where long farmers are allowed to air. Not until then were they given any meat. Up to that time they had a dish of frijoles (beans) or a chunk of barley bread once a day had to suffice.

When they were taken to the prison they were herded in with a crowd of drunks and vagrants. The room was without sanitary facilities of any kind and as prisoners were not allowed to leave the room, filth of every kind existed in pestilential abundance.

The Americans were interviewed at the jail. "We'll stay here tonight," said Barton. "It's the place for us, we don't belong in a hotel. Then we'll get work north of the Rio Grande."

Ovation for Edison.
A demonstration of cheers by the diners and enthusiastic waving of handkerchiefs by the women in the galleries broke out when the toastmaster introduced Thomas Edison as the first American. Mr. Edison will not make a speech, said Mr. Murdoch, "but I want the members of the Associated Press to know him. I propose a rising toast to Thomas A. Edison, the first American."

As the venerable inventor acknowledged the toast with a bow, cheers broke out afresh. The wires next became to the banquet a soprano voice singing a plaintive old southern melody. The voice was that of Josie Collins of the Winter Garden and held the listeners silent until the last note died away.

Then as the inventor of the telephone who had made tonight's long distance entertainment possible and as the man who had made the deaf hear, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell was introduced. Like his brother inventor, he did not speak but rose to acknowledge an enthusiastic standing toast.

you hear it?" the entire telephonic audience answered "Yes." Although it was said that the president could not have heard the answer at his end of the wire, Mr. Taft's humorous declarations that "the safety of the country lies in the fact that you neutralize each other" and that the truth lies not in you but between you" caused a roar of laughter.

Toastmaster Murdoch before introducing Talcott Williams, head of the Pulitzer School of Journalism at Columbia university made an appeal for independence of the press. "The debt that the weak owe to the strong and the strong to the weak," he said, "is independence and with that integrity."

between the president and the department of justice in the sending of the official correspondence yesterday and that partially had been shown in that only correspondence regarding the course of President Roosevelt's administration had been sent to the senate while the papers relating to the Taft administration had not. He asserted again that Attorney General Wickham had his reply ready to send when Senator Johnston's resolution of yesterday reached him and referred to the fact that two similar resolutions by Senators Overman and Lea had not been considered.

Senator Johnston denied there had been an understanding, and said he had seen neither the attorney general nor the president for a month. Senator Clark of Wyoming pointed out that the Johnston resolution differed from the others in that it called for certain specific information. He said Senator Nelson gave testimony in which Colonel Roosevelt when president had withheld correspondence from the bureau of corporations.

ent time who was still opposed to giving the lid from administration secrets. Mr. Bristow insisted that had been misunderstood. Senator Williams discussed the correspondence made public yesterday and then touched on the third item. He said that when Roosevelt had spoken of good trusts and had thus had meant to imply that the trust supporting the administration must deal with leniently, while those who fought it must be treated severely. "Perkins had said he would fight it," he said, "and he said it loud, said Mr. Williams. He was not willing to play in the president's back yard if the president would play right."

Mr. Bristow closed the debate with a defense of Mr. Roosevelt.

NEW WITNESSES

tempts he had made Sunday, Monday and the days following the tragedy for information Senator Smith said to Mr. Marconi.

"I would like to have your best judgment as to whether the custom established by Operator Binns in the Republic disaster of selling his news and the privilege you gave to Cottam in the Titanic disaster had anything to do with your failure to get this information and the public being deprived of the details of this horror?"

Mr. Marconi said he did not think so, and repeatedly insisted he had not attempted to suppress any details.

Discusses Suppression Message. Before taking the stand, Mr. Marconi frankly discussed the message sent from New York to the wireless operators on the Carpathia by Chief Engineer Sammis of the Marconi asking them to hold out their news when they reached port for "four figures."

"Yes, that message was sent by Sammis," said Mr. Marconi, "but I knew nothing about the message until afterwards. There is this about it, that I want to say the message was not sent while the Carpathia was at sea. It was sent after the Carpathia had passed Sandyhook and was nearing port."

When Senator Smith reached the committee room messages from Toronto awaited him containing the information that the depositions of the officers and crew of the steamer Mount Temple which sighted the Titanic would be taken today by Canadian authorities at St. John N. B. and would be forwarded to Washington.

Representatives of the White Star company said they would try to have Fourth Officer Roxhall before the committee tomorrow. He has been ill.

Senator Smith asked Mr. Marconi what he had to do with the wireless apparatus ashore and afloat and whether he selected the operators. "I am consulted as to the installation of apparatus," he said.

"I do not dictate the style of apparatus but I am on call to advise. I travel around the world a good bit on this work."

"What is your official connection with the British government?"

18-Year Job on Hand. "I have no official connection except for consultation. Our company has a contract with the government for the extension of wireless in the British empire. The work will take us at least 18 years."

"Have you the exclusive right to equip the British wireless stations?"

"We have that right so far as the courts protect our patents in England," said Marconi. "We have had dealings with the German government and Germany's ships and stations are controlled by a company which works in harmony with us. We get a percentage for our patents."

Senator Smith sought to discover whether the witness had exclusive contracts with any other governments or powers.

"I have with Italy," said Mr. Marconi. "It is a personal contract and the company has nothing to do with it."

The witness said of contracts with the Canadian government and also an independent understanding with Newfoundland.

Unless an operator was constantly with his receiver on his head, Senator Smith asked, "he would not get a signal."

"That is correct," replied Mr. Marconi.

Pay-Not Attractive. Asked as to the pay of wireless operators, Mr. Marconi said that in England the pay ranged from $4 to $12 a week with board and lodging.

"It is easy to get operators at those wages," he said, "because the sea is attractive to young men."

The wages in America, Marconi said, were slightly higher.

"Did you not get a wireless to the operator of the Carpathia telling him to meet you and Sammis at the Strand hotel and to keep your mouth shut?"

"I did not."

"Did you hear of such a message?"

"Yes from the newspapers."

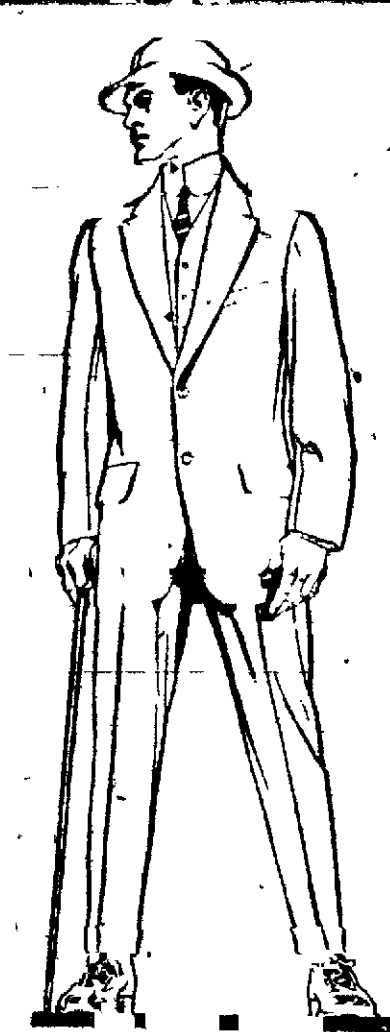

Senator Smith then called the attention of Mr. Marconi to several wireless messages said to have passed between Mr. Marconi and other officers of his company and the operators on board the Carpathia.

These dealt with the possible sale of the detailed story of the sinking of the Titanic and the rescue of her survivors by the Carpathia.

The messages were picked up by vessels of the American navy and forwarded to the navy department which in turn gave them to the investigating committee.

One Message Signed "Marconi." The telegrams read by Senator Smith were as follows: 12 p. m.—Operator Carpathia—Say, old man, Marconi company taking good care of you. Keep your mouth shut. It's fixed for you to get good money. Do your best to clear.

8:20 p. m.—Operators Carpathia and Titanic. Arranged for your exclusive story for dollars in four figures. Mr. Marconi agreeing. Say nothing until you see me. Where are you now?—J. M. Sammis.

of these messages. They are not in phraseology that I approve. I wish to say that I did tell Mr. Sammis as a representative of the British company, we would not prevent any of the operators making any money that they could out of their stories.

Precedent in Republic Disaster. Is that a rule of your company? No, not a rule. Was it ever gone before? Yes.

When? In the case of the Republic disaster, Mr. Binns the operator was given the right to sell his story.

Do you wish the committee to understand that you approve that? Yes, I was anxious that the operators get something.

But Mr. Marconi, Senator Smith exclaimed, do you mean that the details of the greatest sea horror of the world should be withheld from the world except through an exclusive story said by one of your operators?

No, I gave no instructions what ever but I did say that if the operators were offered money they could take it, said Marconi.

I gave that permission as an officer of the British company. With every difference to you as to the right to understand your story.

You think are assuming that I ordered information withheld? I wish to state that as a private citizen I withheld nothing.

Presently the fact that the operators are permitted to take out stories operated by the British company, I want you to tell me, and if you must, I will tell you to limit a privilege you are to limit a privilege.

You said that you told the Titanic disaster. I am anxious you indicate to get the information of the disaster and the details of the horror.

Bride Received $500. The witness declared he felt that the witness, Captain Bride, of Cottam was of no interest that they had a little interest in the matter. He must have been in the understanding that the witness was the sister was the suppressed.

"Do you have much to say to the operators for your stories?" asked Senator Smith.

"I am not sure, but I am sure that the operators are not to be paid for their stories," said Marconi.

Mr. Marconi said that the operators were to be paid for their stories, but he was not sure of the details.

"I have no objection to the operators being paid for their stories," said Marconi.

Two Real Home Comfort Makers

The Ruud Automatic Gas Water Heater and the Modern Gas Range

Just imagine unlimited hot water obtained so freely and with the same lack of attention and forethought as your present cold water supply, and you have some idea of Ruud hot water equipment.

At the turn of a faucet, the Ruud in the basement responds instantly, any time, all the time, a cupful or a bathtubful, heating only the actual amount of water drawn. The moment the faucet is closed the gas is automatically shut off in the heater and your expenses for fuel cease.

The Gas Range, like the Ruud, uses fuel only while it is serving you.

The time, labor and money saved is big interest on your investment.

You have, finally, better cooking, a clean, sanitary kitchen and a domestic ideal conditions.

The best way to appreciate the merits of these two comfort makers is to see them in actual operation at our show-rooms.

Reviews Roosevelt's Charges.

By excerpts from my speeches, Mr. Roosevelt has sought to show and has charged that I am one who has publicly announced that I am in favor of an aristocracy of political bosses, and that I have attacked my political classes in seeking my re-nomination. He charges that the patronage of the government is being surreptitiously used to secure my re-nomination, and that I am the "controversial" and "primarily selfish" man who has used and abused the patronage system. He charges that the influence have been systematically used to defeat the will of the people and to secure delegates for me. He says that I am not a Progressive, but a reactionary; that I was nominated by the great party machine, and that I am the banker of those who oppose the party for non-tariff; and he intimates that I have not the spirit of the Progressive, or the imagination, or the down-headed purpose, essential to the banker of the nation. He says that I am a friend of the aristocracy, and an upholder of special privilege, and that a vote for me is a vote for the interests and against the people. He says

Must Answer as Leader of Party.

But I am presented with this difficulty: I represent a cause, stand for wise progress in governmental affairs and in the improvement of the condition of all the people that the leadership of my party should have. I am the party's leader, and my colleagues said the substantial and sane belittling of the administration vindicates its existence and continuance.

I am shipwrecked. This cause looks to me to be so important and seriously injured by the unjust, unfounded charges against me and by the adroit appeals to Roosevelt and then hatred to Roosevelt, as now looking to the public. They do not say charges and appeals Mr. Roosevelt made and the real and critical issues of the campaign and has misled a great many good and patriotic people of the country. I cannot support anyone who has answered them as they ought to be answered.

has governed the country over, and which he himself, in his conduct of life, wishes to have it thought he has not done. That I am entitled to a square deal, I propose to examine the charges he makes against me and to ask you whether, in making them, he is giving me a square deal.

In detail, Mr. Taft said first with reference to the Cleveland speech in his Carnegie hall address, in which the colored man said:

"Mr. Taft fairly defines the issue when he says that our government is and should be a government of all the people by a representative part of the people. That is an excellent and moderate description of an oligarchy. It defines our government as a government of all of the people by a few of the people."

In reply, Mr. Taft said:

"The speech which Mr. Roosevelt uses, is taken from my speech at Toledo. It is garbled. I said say, 'this

The truth with respect to me is the same as with respect to Mr. Roosevelt. I am willing to support him for the presidency. I gratefully accept such support as comes to me. Mr. Roosevelt has done so. In the past, he is doing so now. I am making no bargain, and I am agreeing to no conditions that would embarrass or weaken the administration of the government. If I should be reelected, I do not say that Mr. Roosevelt has done so, or is fraud in the New York primaries, the courts were open to the Roosevelt supporters for redress. If they failed, he said, to take advantage of this fact, he inferred from this that the charges of fraud elsewhere likewise had no real foundation.

As to Mr. Roosevelt's charges of the dishonest use of federal patronage by the president, he said the 75 per cent of the federal office holders now in the service were appointees of Mr. Roosevelt, and, as a natural result, a large percentage of them favored the former president for re-nomination. No man, he said, had been dismissed because he favored Mr. Roosevelt, and there was every indication that at the Chicago convention the influence of the federal office holders would be less effective for any one candidate than ever before in the history of the party.

To the charge that Mr. Roosevelt nat-administration. Mr. Taft continued: Now I find Mr. Roosevelt coming the other way, denouncing the antitrust law as a "rough, haphazard order." He says that the decree in the Standard Oil case is ineffective; that the price of the stock has gone up, and in some way or other I am responsible for the fact that the price did go up. The Roosevelt administration is condemned because that decree was confirmed in the supreme court. The truth is that the decree as finally entered and enforced was drawn exactly as the Roosevelt administration wanted the bill which by direction of Mr. Roosevelt he filed against the Standard Oil company, had asked that it be drawn.

One of the real reasons why Mr. Roosevelt ought not to be selected as candidate of any party is the natural distrust that the whole business community will have in respect to the measures which Mr. Roosevelt will propose. It is a fact that the business interests of social justice, which had to give so much time to the prosecution of the Standard Oil case that the International Harvester company investigation got sidetracked behind those other ones. We simply have done the best we could with the small force at our disposal."

Mr. Smith, in a subsequent letter, says:

"A report of any sort on the International Harvester company was prepared by this bureau during the administration. At the time you were out of office, the bureau had done less than 10 per cent of the work necessary to make an official report on this subject. Consequently, of course, no report nor any part thereof on Harvester had been written or drafted at that time by the bureau of corporate information. I have never received from you any instructions in regard to such a report, except orders intended to facilitate its preparation and publication."

campaign in Illinois linked his name with that of Senator Lorimer in such a way as to give the impression that a vote for Taft was a vote for Lorimer. "I was in the State of Illinois for two years and have had no communication with or from him. In Illinois Mr. Lorimer was conducting a campaign of his own. I did not ask his support. If he had been in my position, I would have no influence he may have given in my favor but not because he liked me, but because he felt more bitter toward Roosevelt than I. I further accumulated assistance or knowledge I could have given him. I would have said that it had been unfair and unjust for Mr. Roosevelt to attempt to draw down on me the popular indignation against Senator Lorimer. I would have said that the attitude of Illinois against me; but it was peculiarly unfair in Mr. Roosevelt to do this when he knew what he did. I have a very natural attitude toward Senator Lorimer.

Mr. Taft then read a letter he wrote to Colonel Roosevelt on January 6, 1911, in which he said he wanted the

The use of a little Gold Dust in your dish-water will make your dishes whiter, sweeter and cleaner than they ever can be without it. Unlike soap, C.M. Dust does more than clean the surface. It goes deep, after germs and hidden food particles, and sterilizes everything it touches.

He says now, although his language does not bear such a construction, that he meant he would not accept a nomination for a consecutive third term. He says so in face of the fact that the tradition of the country is that no president has been re-elected after the year of 1860, when General Grant was elected a third term. Four years after he had left the presidential office.

It is not for me to enter into a discussion of the plain meaning of the language he used. If he had frankly told that he would not accept a nomination, no one would be disposed to hold him to a promise of that sort merely because he had made it. The president and his treatment of his promise in informing light on the value that ought now to be attached to any promise of this kind he may make for the future. The important fact is that this language was the statement of a principle essential to the welfare of the republic.

stop to his investigation, and I reported the situation of affairs at a cabinet meeting.

After a full, but harmonious, discussion, it was decided on the advice of Secretaries and Taft that, inasmuch as either house had a right under the law creating the bureau of corporate information to distribute information by that bureau, this investigation of Smith's must be considered as one conducted by the senate itself, and it would be appropriate for the department of justice to await its conclusion before proceeding with the suit.

Mr. Taft added that by the telephone conversation and by subsequent correspondence he would not publish unless Mr. Roosevelt desired, he learned that no such article was contemplated, but Mr. Roosevelt indicated that he would assist in the matter in other ways.

"I have never given Mr. Roosevelt nor anyone else the slightest reason to suppose that I had changed my attitude," he said.

Mr. Taft charged that Mr. Roosevelt now was seeking to take advantage of the supposed feeling among the farmers of the country against reciprocity with Canada. He said he would not object to this, but for the fact that he consulted Colonel Roosevelt 10 days before he made the agreement with Canada, and that the latter was "shrewd" in the

SKINNER TELLS WHY BANQUET ON SUNDAY

There has been some misunderstanding in regard to the dinner to be given at the Antlers next Sunday night by the Colorado Federation of the National Federation of Democratic Clubs according to M. A. Skinner, president of the federation and toastmaster at the dinner.

We are not going to have a big banquet," said Mr. Skinner last night. "We progressives are simply going to get together at dinner Sunday night to discuss the principles of pure democracy and political reform in the interests of the people. Most of the delegates to the state convention will arrive here Sunday, and as we will all have to eat, it was suggested that we get together and discuss important questions."

We would not have called the meeting for Sunday night in the first place, if we had had anything at all to do with setting the date of the convention. The dinner machine named the date. If we had had anything to do with it, we would not have called it so early, and we would not have set the date on Monday. As it is, I do not see any harm in meeting and talking over the situation."

I am not a member of the committee on arrangements, so I can say nothing about that part of the dinner. However, there will be ladies at the dinner—at least, a number have signified their intention of attending and as we planned in the first place, there will be no drinks served and no smoking. It is simply an ordinary dinner."

Charles W. Franklin of Denver, Progressive candidate for national committee is chairman of the committee who have agreed to give addresses are Governor Shafroth, Alva Adams, C. S. Thomas and John T. Bottom.

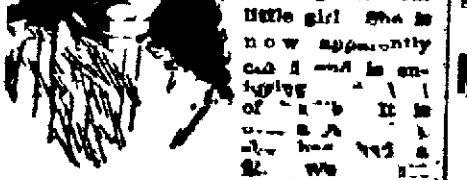

JUNIOR CONFERENCE FIRST M. E. CHURCH

Find a Cure for Epilepsy and Years of Suffering

"My daughter was afflicted with epilepsy for three years, the attacks every few days. We employed a local doctor but they did her no good. About a year ago we heard of Dr. Miles' Nervine, and it truly has cured her. I am now a happy mother and my daughter is a normal girl."

Dr. Miles' Nervine is one of the best remedies known for this affliction. It has proven a local in thousands of cases and there is no need to avoid it. It is a safe, reliable remedy.

PROPERTY OWNERS FAVOR LIGHT PLAN

Three Entire Blocks Signed Up Already for Decorative Street Illumination

With the exception of a few who are out of the city, about every property owner on Tejon street and Pikes Peak avenue in the downtown district has signed up in favor of the ornamental street lighting system according to the reports of the various subcommittee at a meeting of the chamber of commerce yesterday.

This report means that Tejon street, Pikes Peak avenue, between Cascade and Nevada will be lighted in the modern way. Moreover, property owners on Cascade, Nevada, Huerfano, Bijou and Kiowa are agitating the matter and it is probable that the entire business section of the city will be lighted by this scheme.

George S. Milne, one of the solicitors has reported that the work in his block on North Tejon between Platte and Bijou, has been completed. The full list of the owners who signed being Park commission, G. A. Laiff, John Lennox, Helen Waterman, Cheyenne Building corporation and Jessie H. Thorne.

The Blocks Signed Up.
This makes the third entire block to be signed up. All the remaining blocks are complete with the exception of one on Iva signatories, and in most cases these owners are out of the city and have not yet been reached by letters.

Petitions, however, have not been circulated among the owners on Cascade, Nevada, Kiowa or Bijou, but it is thought that they will be started in the next two or three days. On Huerfano street about 75 per cent of the owners between Nevada and the viaduct have been signed. The block on Cascade between Pikes Peak and Huerfano is practically assured.

Some idea of the amount of light given by the cluster lights on ornamental poles may be obtained by looking at the two poles in front of the Shields-Morley Grocery Company on North Cascade avenue. These poles have just been installed and as the avenue is lighted only by arcs the poles show up to a better advantage than in front of the Burns.

At the meeting yesterday Dunbar F. Carpenter and Dr. D. H. Rine were appointed a committee to secure the signatures of the owners on Kiowa between Cascade and Nevada.

MORE THAN 4,000 SHRINERS COMING

In addition to the 12 special trains carrying about 1,000 delegates to the Imperial Council of the Mystic Shrine in Los Angeles, May 6-8, scheduled to pass through Colorado Springs during the first week in May, there will be at least six more trains carrying about 4,000 passengers, according to advices received at the local Santa Fe office yesterday.

Each of these trains will stay here about 12 hours and during their brief visit the Shriners will be welcomed by local Masons and Shriners. Masonic temple will be thrown open to the visitors.

The schedule of the special trains to pass through here over the Santa Fe follows:

Lu Lu temple from Philadelphia arrive here at 8:15 a. m. April 26, with 350 on board. This train is traveling in two sections of nine cars each, and one of the largest which will pass through the city. It carries a band and Arab patrol.

Murat temple, Indianapolis, carrying 125 people, arrive here at 6:30 a. m. on April 28.

Alladin temple, Columbus, O. carrying 115 people, arrive here on the morning of April 30 at 11:15 a. m.

All New England Shrines, Salem, N. H. arrive here at 6:30 a. m. on April 30, with 175 passengers.

Ismaiah temple, Buffalo, N. Y. carrying 100 passengers, arrive at 4:30 a. m. on May 2.

Sesostri temple, Lincoln, Neb. carrying 50 delegates, arrive at 2 p. m. May 2.

"The Saladin Special," carrying the nobles and friends of the Saladin temple, Mystic Shrine, Grand Rapids, Mich., will reach this city over the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, May 3.

This will be one of the finest trains that has ever left the central north. After the convention it will continue from Los Angeles on an extensive trip north to British Columbia and east through the northwestern states.

C. E. York, vice president of J. W. York & Sons, band instrument manufacturers, and his famous Comique band, will give a concert during their stay in this city.

MAY PERMIT FISHING IN PROSPECT LAKE SHORTLY

If Commissioner Frost has his way, the public will be allowed to fish in Prospect lake this season, beginning May 1. He will present the matter to the city council this morning.

"The lake has been well stocked for several years," Frost said yesterday, "and by this time the fish should have attained sufficient size to come within the requirements of the game and fishing laws. If the council decides to open the lake, and we find that too many fish are being taken out, we will close it again immediately."

MAYOR AVERY WILL TALK ABOUT HIMSELF

"The Mayor and His Problems" will be discussed by Mayor Avery before the Socialists in Carpenters hall next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. The public is invited to attend.

ODD FELLOWS HOLD BIG CELEBRATION

More Than 500 Attend Meeting Veteran Jewels Given to Pioneer Members

Pikes Peak lodge No. 110 of the Odd Fellows celebrated the ninety-third anniversary of the founding of the order. Members of the lodge in this section and their families totaling more than 500 were present at the entertainment in Odd Fellows temple.

Dr. J. M. J. Chap of Pikes Peak temple, grand master of Colorado, made the address of the evening, speaking of the work of the order since its founding and tracing its growth and progress during the last 93 years. He spoke of the practical benefits of the order and the benefits of fraternalism in general. Dr. Chapman highly praised the women of America, declaring that the nation of the United States among the nations of the world is due to the fidelity of the women.

Those who were accepted jewels for continuous membership in a good standing in the lodge for more than 25 years were J. M. Young, H. C. McCrellan, J. M. Bolton, T. F. Thomas, J. L. Road, F. S. Bumstead, Rudolph Heyse and F. P. Wheeler. Each made a short address telling of the early history of Pikes Peak lodge No. 110 and incidents connected with its existence.

Other pioneer members of the lodge who are out of the city or were not able to be present to receive the veteran jewels in person are L. C. Dana, J. K. Paul, C. T. Lathfield, W. P. Jones, W. Holmes, W. Fowler, S. M. Blake and W. V. Ferral.

Intercessory remarks were made by Martin Longfield and a solo was given by Miss George Smith with a reading by Miss Eleanor Liller. George Bender gave a monologue and a trio was given by Miss Beale Osborne, Miss Glen Mumma and Miss Zoe Rocker. Instrumental music was furnished by Fink's orchestra.

Bill in Congress to Investigate Mineral Springs of Colorado

Congressman Taylor of Colorado introduced a bill in the house of representatives, April 13, asking that an appropriation of $10,000 be made to be expended by the geological survey in investigating the number, character, analysis and value for economic and medicinal purposes of the mineral springs in this state.

The bill, which follows, was referred to the committee on appropriations:

A BILL CONCERNING THE MINERAL SPRINGS OF COLORADO.
Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that the sum of $10,000 be and the same is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated to be expended by the geological survey in the investigation and report upon the number, character, analysis and value for economic and medicinal purposes of the various mineral springs in the state of Colorado; and that such appropriation shall be available until such investigations and reports are completed.

SEED FUND NOW $7,750

One hundred dollars was added to the Chamber of Commerce seed and feed fund yesterday bringing the fund up to $7,750 just $22.50 less than the required amount.

The Colorado Springs Light, Heat and Power company donated $50 of the $100 raised yesterday. The electric company officials said they would gladly donate that amount instead of giving it in the form of a loan, as requested. The Smith Packing company subscribed $25 and the Bridger Grocery company, $25.

The $10,000 fund will relieve only the needy farmers in El Paso county and parts of the two of three counties adjoining, so it is essential that at least that amount be raised. The farmers are in a bad shape with regard to crops and they must have feed for their stock and need to plant this spring, else they will make a complete failure this year.

All who wish to subscribe an amount in the form of a loan to be returned when the crops are gathered may do so on the blanks which will be found at the Gazette office and the banks.

A Harmless Way to Darken the Hair

Who does not know the value of Sage and Sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, Sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair.

Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than Sage and Sulphur, if properly prepared.

The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put out an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, in which Sage and Sulphur are combined with other valuable remedies for keeping the hair and scalp in clean, healthy condition.

If your hair is losing its color or constantly coming out, or if you are troubled with dandruff or dry, itchy scalp, get a fifty-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, use it according to the simple directions, and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in the appearance of your hair.

All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy does not exactly as represented. Agents, The Robinson Drug Co.

PHILADELPHIA MAN IS DELIGHTED WITH GOLF CLUB COURSE

H. I. Brown, a prominent business man of Philadelphia, and a golf enthusiast, is in Colorado Springs for a few days on a tour of the country. He is a member of the Huntington Valley country club of Philadelphia. In an interview yesterday he devoted much time to complimentary remarks about the Colorado Springs golf club and its new course.

I want to express the great pleasure that I have experienced in playing over the course of the Colorado Springs golf club," he said. "I think that I have never seen a course that impressed me with the possibilities of this one. In the first place the surrounding scenery almost surpasses description. Eastern golfers never dreamed of playing under such conditions. The only course in the east which I am familiar with in any way reminds me of that of the Kwapok country club of Manchester, N. H. situated right in the heart of the Green mountains, but even there the views do not begin to approach those that you have."

Atmosphere Exhilarating.
Then again there is something about the atmosphere of Colorado Springs that seems to me more exhilarating for golfing than anywhere else I have ever been. It has made me feel as if I were walking on air, and at the end of 18 holes I have felt as fresh as when I started.

Now as to the course itself, it seems to me that it has possibilities that are really remarkable. I have been astonished at the fine springy nature of the turf and the innate richness of the underlying soil. If, as I understand it, be the case the right kind of grass can be grown during the season it seems to me that you will have a course which in the character of its soil and turf more nearly approaches the fine English and Scotch courses than any that I have seen in America.

Of course, it is true that you course, as yet, is raw. As it is today, there is a certain similarity and consequent monotony between a number of them should be carefully and intelligently bunkered. In this connection it might be pertinent, perhaps, to suggest that the fashion of making bunkers too deep and too difficult is growing steadily in disfavor in the east and west, to a great extent, being abandoned.

The thought is that a golf course should on the whole be planned to meet the play of the good average golfer rather than that of the great expert. This at least, is the strong feeling among the average good players that I know in the east and it seems to me therefore, that while your course needs bunkering very badly, the thought that I have suggested should be borne in mind in carrying out this work.

Holes Very Fine.

As to a number of holes they are always in themselves very fine. The first hole, for instance, I should say could rank well with any first hole that I have ever seen and does not need much, if any, attention. On the other hand, the second hole does need to be guarded in front of, and perhaps around the green. Again, the same thing may be said of the third hole and the fourth hole.

The fifth hole up the hill is a very fine one and the sixth hole likewise. It seems to me that it would be wise to do some bunkering along the lines of play between these holes particularly for the purpose of catching slices.

"The seventh hole will be a very fine one if the green is bunkered. It could be made almost an island green with the entrance alone unguarded but if this is done it should be made a very large green, so that when the ground is hard a well-pitched ball will not roll over into a pit."

"The eighth hole again, is a very fine one just as it stands and about the only thing that I would suggest would be a long pit or bunker between this and the line of the ninth hole."

"The ninth hole might also be guarded as to the green but this would require to be done scientifically for the reason that a long player under favorable conditions might often be able to carry the green with his second stroke. Therefore it seems to me that a bunker or pit if any, should be placed, say, 50 to 100 yards short of the green."

"The tenth hole as it stands is very fine. It will take a long golfer to reach the green on his second, and will give him an advantage over the average player. It seems to me that no further hazards are needed here."

"Simply Delighted"

"Altogether I can say only that I have been simply delighted with the course, perhaps the most so, since I had no idea that you had a course here with such possibilities as that there was any thought of developing such a fine course as you appear to have in mind. In my opinion all that is necessary now to have one of the finest courses in the country is to continue to give it the same kind of careful and intelligent attention that it has hitherto received."

"I hope that it may be my privilege to visit Colorado Springs again before many years have passed and I shall be very much surprised if I do not find here one of the finest and most attractive golf courses in the world."

"Modesty compels me to add that among the golfers at home I do not rank as even a good second-class player. I like to think that this is because I am so busy that I do not have sufficient time for practice, but I am none the less an enthusiastic connoisseur of the game and I can say only in conclusion that during a tour of the country which has so far included six or seven golfing centers, I have nowhere run across any course that seems to me to have any where near the innate possibilities as does the wonderful course of the Colorado Springs Golf Club."

Mr. Brown is the guest of W. H. Evans, 331 East Columbia street, during his stay in Colorado Springs.

COLLEGE NOT CONNECTED

WITH COMING PRODUCTION

The Colorado College Athletic board has withdrawn from all connection with the production of "The Nautical Knot," which is to be presented at the opera house, under the direction of Dr. W. A. Murphy, according to J. W. Park, a member of the board. The action is the result of uncertainty on the part of the board that the opera will pay the expense of putting it on, and the unwillingness of Dr. Murphy to confer with the college authorities regarding it. Says Mr. Park, Professor Park states that it is not the intention of the board to endanger the financial success of the opera, for the board considers it a good thing, but it feels that the financial interests of the college are at stake.

The company which is now working on "The Nautical Knot" has been organized into a musical organization to stage new, light operas, and has adopted the plan of the Bostonians, a well-known musical organization, of the country, upon which to work. It intends to stage only new operas with good music and to spend most of its time on the music rather than on acting.

When "Pinafore" is produced next summer the company wishes to stage it on the lake at Broadmoor with all the realistic effects of a ship at sea. It is rumored that the production will be staged for the management of the Broadmoor casino as an attraction to the tourists.

TUNNEL FLOW STEADY

Frank Smale, superintendent of the Portland mine at Axtell, who was here yesterday conferring with the officials on the leases to be let on Portland ground, says the flow from the Roosevelt tunnel continues steady at approximately 12,000 gallons a minute, and the water level is reaching about 15 feet a month.

It will be several months before the real benefits of the tunnel will be reaped by the district, although the project has been a great success in every way, said Mr. Smale. "A great deal of new work is being done, and many more men have been employed, but it will be some time before such mines as the Portland and Elston will have new levels opened. It is thought that the water level is now about 15 feet below the top of the Portland shaft, but we are not sure until assured we can go the full depth to another level."

No leases on Portland territory have yet been granted.

Away With Catarrh a Filthy Disease

If you have any symptoms of catarrh, such as itching in the head, profuse discharge from the nose, phlegm in the throat, causing hawking and spitting, dull pain in the head, or ringing in the ears, just anoint the nostrils or rub the throat or chest with a little Ely's Cream Balm, and see how quickly you will get relief.

In just a few minutes you will feel your head clearing, and after using the Balm for a day, or so the next discharge will be checked, the pain, soreness and fever will be gone, and you will no longer be offensive to yourself and friends by your constant hawking, spitting and blowing.

Shake off the grip of catarrh before it takes hold of your system. It clears the nose, head and throat of all the rank poison, soothes, heals and strengthens the raw, sore membranes, and makes you proof against catarrh.

One application will convince you, and a fifty cent bottle will generally effect a complete cure. Get it from your druggist and start the treatment at once. Special agent, The Robinson Drug Co.

U. S. TITANIC INQUIRY

LONDON, April 24.—The British public is displaying much resentment at the course the American senate committee investigating the Titanic disaster is taking regarding the detention of British subjects and the manner of their examination. The matter is being discussed everywhere and the attitude in general is taken that J. Bruce Ismay, president of the International Mercantile Marine, and the crew of the Titanic, were convicted before the hearing.

The subject is one of great anxiety in official circles and it is feared that should the senate committee condemn the company and the crew its action would give rise to ill-feeling between the two nations. The American foreign office has simply asked Ambassador Bryce for information regarding the inquiry.

The dissatisfaction of the public might be alleviated if it had a clearer idea as to the scope of intention of the American investigation. It is admitted the senate has a perfect right to inquire into the death of Americans, but it is felt that the committee is going far beyond this.

Some of the questions asked by Senator Smith, chairman of the committee, are reproduced and editorially filled in the newspapers today. The Globe refers to the senator as "a born fool from the wilds of Michigan, who possibly is compelled by the exigencies of electing himself to be as insolent as possible to Englishmen." Unfortunately, the investigation is very much in his hands, and the best efforts of the more reputable senators hardly can serve to mitigate the harm he has done.

MASSACHUSETTS RAILWAY COMPANIES MAY MERGE

BOSTON, April 25.—A bill providing for the consolidation of the Boston & Maine and the New Haven railroads under the name of the "New England lines" and the creation of a public service commission is before the Massachusetts legislature today, sent by Governor Dows, along with a message of 5,000 words explaining in detail its reason and purposes.

The proposal which is understood to meet the approval of the railroad officials is to dissolve the holding company under which the two systems are now operated and to provide for their actual physical union by a four track tunnel under the city of Boston, the electrification of all lines in the metropolitan area and other improvements involving an expenditure of approximately $100,000,000.

STATE DEMOCRATIC

J. Arnold, candidate for mayor of Denver, and Governor John P. Shafroth, Denver. All of these have been invited to speak at the Democratic dinner, and most of them have accepted.

The convention headquarters will be established at the Antlers, as will be the campaign headquarters. The convention will undoubtedly instruct the eight delegates at large for Clark, and each of the two congressional contingents, which will be held the same day, will select two Clark delegates.

The Denver delegation to the state convention representing nearly one-fourth of the voting strength of the entire gathering, will take its seat as an unopposed delegation, but will vote to instruct national delegates for the Missouri man. The action of the Denver delegation in favor of Clark, the 12 Colorado votes for Clark.

Of the 1,048 votes in the convention, Denver will have 277. Coupled with the votes of other delegations already instructed for Clark, a majority vote for Clark is assured.

Table is but one contest in the state convention, a contest for State Chairman George T. Franklin. That will be in the seating of the Arapahoe county delegation. The contesting delegation from Arapahoe, opposes the Morgan-street faction.

DENVER GIRL DISAPPEARS

DENVER, April 24.—Miss Louise Trash, 9 years old, a department store employee, has been reported by Mrs. J. B. Greshill with whom she lived, as missing since last Tuesday, and the police have been asked to search for the young woman. Miss Trash had been ill with the grippe and when she started for work Tuesday morning, complained of a slight fever. Mrs. Greshill expressed her belief that Miss Trash's brain became clouded from the fever and she just wandered away.

Mrs. William E. Carter, the New York society woman, who, with her husband, were fortunate enough to be placed in one of the lifeboats of the Titanic that was picked up hours later by the rescue ship Carpathia. Mrs. Carter lost thousands of dollars' worth of jewelry and gowns which she had purchased in Paris just previously to sailing on the Titanic.

TAFT AND ROOSEVELT

THREE illuminating studies of the personalities of and the relations between Taft and Roosevelt have recently appeared in as many different magazines. "The Senator's Secretary" gives an account of the beginning of the breach between Taft and Roosevelt in The Saturday Evening Post for April 13. George Kibbe Turner and Arthur Wallace Dunn tell "Who's Behind Taft?" in the May McClure's, and William Allen White gives "A Statement of the Relations Between President Taft and His Friend Colonel Roosevelt" in The American Magazine for May. All of these articles make it clear why the Colonel's hat is in the ring and why machine men and special interests are such enthusiastic Taft supporters.

"The Senator's Secretary" says that the first rupture between the President and the Colonel occurred in December, 1908, over the appointment of an Attorney General by President-elect Taft. Mr. Roosevelt urged the appointment of Frank B. Kellogg for the cabinet position. The Colonel understood that his successor favored Mr. Kellogg's appointment. But the Colonel was informed later that Mr. Kellogg would not be appointed. And how did this information reach him? Through a friend of Kellogg to whom a senator had said: "Well, we've got it fixed so Kellogg won't be in Taft's Cabinet."

Mr. Taft confirmed the senator's statement. It was "fixed." The President-elect stated that he would not appoint Mr. Kellogg Attorney General. Why? Because Mr. Kellogg was conducting the Government's case against the Standard Oil Company and he, Mr. Taft, did not think it advisable to have in his Cabinet a man connected with a prosecution then in progress.

President Taft has the right to select as members of his Cabinet such men as he sees fit to select. Mr. Taft used that right. The President is not subject to criticism for refusing to carry out the recommendations of any person. Mr. Taft's obligation to Mr. Roosevelt is great. Mr. Taft is "President" Taft because of Mr. Roosevelt's backing. However, the obligation is entirely personal. Mr. Taft had the right, and used it, of rejecting Mr. Roosevelt's recommendations.

ROOSEVELT'S POLICIES DISCARDED.

However, there is another point. Although Mr. Taft was justified in rejecting any or all of Mr. Roosevelt's recommendations, he was not justified in throwing overboard the Roosevelt policies. President Taft had subscribed to these policies. He was elected because he had promised to carry them out. President Taft is responsible to the people for the appointments that he has made. He has failed if he has not appointed men who will carry out the policies advocated by the party which elected him.

It is interesting to compare Kellogg who was not appointed Attorney General, with Ballinger, who was appointed Secretary of the Interior. Kellogg was Government prosecutor in the Standard Oil case, Ballinger was attorney for the Cunningham interests which were attempting to secure title to Alaskan lands from the Department of the Interior. Mr. Taft evidently did not feel that Mr. Ballinger's connections would embarrass him, the President, in carrying out his policies; for Mr. Ballinger was appointed. Mr. Taft stated that Mr. Kellogg's connections would embarrass him, the President, in carrying out his policies; and Mr. Kellogg was not appointed. Far be it from us to say that Taft did not have been embarrassing to President Taft to have had Mr. Kellogg in his Cabinet during the past three years.

Mr. Taft is responsible for his Cabinet appointments. He has not appointed men who have sympathized with the policies that elected him. The President is accountable, not to Mr. Roosevelt, but to the rank and file of the Republican party. Wherever presidential preference primaries have been held the rank and file have expressed not been faithful to his promises.

The reasons for President Taft's failure are to be found in his temperament. As a man's temperament is inherent and unchanging, so the reasons for Taft's failure in the past will cause him to fail in the future if he be re-elected Chief Executive.

THE PRESIDENT'S WHITE FINDS THAT DISINCLINATION TO "ROUGH IT."

William Allen White finds that Roosevelt's support of Taft was due to "the tendency of men to admire traits that they themselves do not possess." He finds the essential difference between the personalities of Roosevelt and Taft stated succinctly by President Taft. "My predecessor," said Mr. Taft in Collier's of March, 1909, "loves a life akin to that of the pioneer. He loves roughing it, and I don't."

It was temperament again. Mr. Taft's idea of men of earnest enthusiastic interest in the public weal was a cabinet of corporation lawyers whose whole professional careers had been employed fighting for private weal, and his idea of congressional leadership was found in Cannon and Aldrich. "He loves roughing it, I don't," was written all over the new administration. And so when a public servant like Glavin or Pinchot appeared to institute justice under the message, the messenger lost his head. It is the habit of the standard executive to chop off the heads of the bearers of unpleasant communications.

It is all a matter of temperament between the two. The very mental attitude that kept Taft the lieutenant in constant amiable agreement with Roosevelt the superior, and fooled Roosevelt with the conviction that the agreement was fundamental and not the easiest way to do the day's work, makes it impossible for Taft to seek Roosevelt now—made it impossible for Taft ever to consult Roosevelt about anything.

William Allen White is correct. It is a matter of temperament. But there is something else, President Taft's whole environment, his family connections and his experience on the bench, unfit him for work against the special interests, unfit him for the work of a militant executive. One of Mr. Taft's brothers "was a highly successful corporation lawyer in New York; another had become a millionaire, with tremendous corporate investments, by marriage. In the savageness of current political speech the relationship has been crystallized in Washington by the characterization of Mr. Taft as 'the little brother of the rich.'"

EVOLUTION OF TAFT'S ALLIANCES.

Turner and Dunn show, in detail, how Taft's judicial temperament has put him in the control of the reactionary forces in Congress.

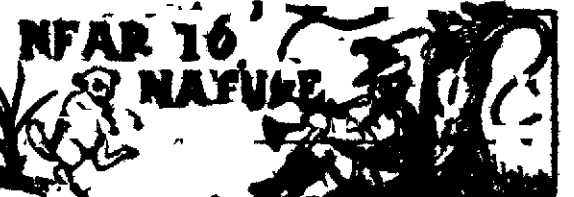

Roosevelt's motto had always been "Strike the first blow." Taft always worked on the principle of a sort of Golden Rule. "Never do anything to anybody until he first does something to you."

Within six months Senator Dooliver, the "insurgent" from Iowa had given the definition of the new President which was later adapted to the whimsical characterization of a large body (completely ignored) of men who know exactly what they want.

Naturally day by day the influence of the constant pressure increased. More and more both consciously and unconsciously, the Chief Executive—who is really a heart of a lion and no executive at all, but a man under the direction of a man who is not a legislator at all, but a wonderful executive.

When President Taft's failure to keep faith with the voters who elected him resulted in the defeat of 1910, Washington said: "Taft is the prize baby of Cincinnati, who was never spanked until he was fifty-two. He doesn't know what to make of it." But the defeat of the President's supporters in 1910, and the present opposition to Mr. Taft himself, has resulted in this. Mr. Taft has turned to machines and machine men everywhere in order to secure a re-nomination; he has used the power of federal patronage to secure his ends. "There's nothing sly about Mr. Taft, when he wants anything in politics, he reaches for it with the simple directness of a young boy." He directed his campaign along the old lines of the manipulation of patronage.

President Taft has become completely identified with the political powers that have always fought Theodore Roosevelt. His strength is not with the people but with the machine. His sinews of war are not public confidence and esteem, but patronage and corporate support. The forces now in conflict in the Republican party have been aligning for three years. Today the issues between those forces are unmistakably clear-cut and fundamental. Compromise is not possible.

OPEN PARLIAMENT

THE SUNDAY CLOSING LAW.

To the Editor of The Gazette:
 Will you permit a correction of the statement in Wednesday morning's Gazette which implies that the Sunday ordinance proposed by the Ministerial Association forbids the delivery of milk on Sunday, or any labor?

The ordinance proposed by the Ministerial Association does not contemplate preventing the delivery of milk on Sunday, or of ice cream. While it provides for a rest day each week for the latter, it does not forbid labor unless it disturbs a meeting, a private family or the public, and even then it grants liberal allowance of necessity.

The Glad Toiler

By WALT MASON

The man who really likes to labor, whatever the tool that he employs the hammer, trowel, post or sawer—will find this life replete with joys. But sorrow looms up, grim and bulky, to him who holds that toil is woe, whose head is sore, whose face is sulky, whose feet are twelve degrees below. The willing worker doesn't languish among the walling unemployed; his cottage doesn't reek with anguish, his larder knows no aching void. I hired a man to wash my survey which got all muddy in a ditch, he gave up all his time to forty other vices of the idle rich. He boomed away like some pipe organ denouncing this and roasting that, and throwing things at J. Pierp Morgan and every other plutocrat. And as I fired him through the transom when he had loitered for half a day, and hired Jim Briggs to wash my hands, and rid its shining wheels of clay. With noble ire he never bristled, his soul with sorrow wasn't soiled, he merely rustled round and whistled and cleaned the blamed rig in an hour. And old Jim Briggs is always busy, for men who want a useful hand just chase him round till they are dizzy, and hand him coin to beat the band. (Copyright, 1912, by George Matthew Adams)

When muskets take the place of oratory, revolution becomes serious.

For every promise, there comes a settlement day.

After we get what is coming to us from the railroads let us go after what we should have had from them in the past. That would be more progress.

Employers say that when they get a really good man they are not only compelled to pay him high wages, but are forced to go to the trouble of looking him up.

So many men are worthless that it is surprising that at least one does not realize his worthlessness, but such a thing never happened on the face of the earth.

THE CHIT-CHAT

By RUTH CAMERON

The benefit we receive must be rendered again, line for line, cent for cent, deed for deed, to some body. Emerson

Way did you insist on paying Lucille for doing those dinner cards? Some woman questioned another, it is good practice for her, and I'm sure she would be glad to do them for nothing."

My dear said the other woman, "If I pay Lucille 10 cents apiece for those dinner cards I'll be square with her, and I'll know just what they cost me. If I let her do them for nothing, I'll be under obligation to her, and I shall not know how much they cost until I pay back that obligation. Let me tell you about the last time I allowed myself to be put under obligation. Last winter Mrs. Band took care of the babies for me several times. She offered to do it and said she loved to, but, of course, I felt under obligation to her. Well, in the spring, she told me that her time was coming to a close, and that she was very anxious to go home. I had a good time and I'd just lapped it up. I entertained her for her so, of course, I felt in honor bound to do it. Ordinarily, I would have really liked to, but the children had just had the measles, and I had been up nights with them until I could hardly see for sleepiness, and the house was disgracefully dirty; and I was just breaking in a new maid; and Fred was having a fearful attack of hay fever; so, altogether, the party I gave for her was the worst nightmare I ever had asleep or awake. I made up my mind then and there that I'd never put myself under obligation to anyone again."

Does this point of view make you as ungracious as the lady certainly did make me rather sweeping statements, but I think there is a good deal in her point of view, nevertheless.

Some of us have the habit of accepting favors with a serene sense of having gotten something for nothing. But one never gets something for nothing, even from one's friends. If you have done some favor for your friend, don't you feel at liberty to call upon him when you are in need of his particular kind of talent or ability or anything else which he has toward you in reversed circumstances?

I do not think it is necessary to go so far as to refuse to ever put one's self under obligation. That would be to nullify the interchange of talents and opportunities, which is one of the legitimate uses of friendship. But don't think you are settling something for nothing when you allow yourself to be put under obligation. Remember that you are really giving your note of hand to pay on demand to bearer an unknown sum in unknown currency, and be sure you are willing to honor that note before you give it.

CONTINUOUS TOPOGRAPHIC MAP

More Than Half a Million Sold Year by the United States Geological Survey.

On the topographic maps made by the United States Geological Survey the mountains, hills, valleys and canyons—all the features that make up the varied surface of the earth—are mapped, portrayed by means of contour lines. Each contour line represents a certain height above sea level—that is, it indicates a course or contour along which all points are at exactly the same altitude. As contours are continuous horizontal lines, they wind smoothly about smooth surfaces, recede into all re-entrant angles or ravines, and project in peaks around spurs or prominences. Thus a person following the path indicated by a contour line, say the 1,000-foot contour, will find himself always walking on the same level, namely, at an altitude of 1,000 feet.

The contour lines on the maps are spaced to represent equal vertical intervals or differences in altitude. The vertical interval between any two contours, as represented on one map is the same, whether they lie along a cliff or on a gentle slope; but to attain a given height it is of course necessary to go farther on a gentle slope than on a steep slope; and therefore contours are far apart on gentle slopes and near together on steep ones. The spacing of the contour lines thus indicates the approximate grade of any slope.

A small contour interval is necessary to express the relief of a flat or gently undulating country; a steep or mountainous country can, as a rule, be adequately represented on the same scale by the use of a larger interval. The smallest interval used on the atlas sheets of the Geological Survey is five feet, for regions like the Mississippi Delta, the Sacramento valley, and the Dismal swamp. For great mountain masses, like those in Colorado and the high Sierra of California, the interval may be 100 or 200 feet, and for less rugged country contour intervals of 10, 20, 25 and 50 feet are used.

With a little practice in reading the contour lines the traveler finds the topographic maps of the Geological Survey a most exact picture of the country, enabling him to see at a glance the character of any particular area. That the maps are of popular utility is shown, for instance, by the fact that the survey sells thousands of them to automobilists every month. Last year's sales of these maps amounted to more than half a million.

SHIPPING BANANAS

Care Is Needed to Keep Them From Becoming Overripe

From the New York Sun

Before the banana reaches the breakfast table or the hawker's van it may journey 2,000 miles and pass through half a dozen different hands. The consumer is generally critical and troubles not at all about how, when or where the banana came from so long as it is in good condition and to his liking. The shipment of bananas 20 years ago was a problem, the solution of which was a problem for the consumer. The consumer had to pay for, but now he reaps the profit of experience in transportation. Bananas shipped to America generally come from the West Indies, the Central America republics, Mexico or South America and such great studies have been made in the methods used for their shipment that as compared with the 50 per cent loss of 20 years ago from the time the fruit left the banana groves until it reached the consumer's table the loss is now figured out at a half of 1 per cent in a ship's hold.

With the growth of the banana traffic the banana boat came into being, and a special line of steamers runs to the South American ports solely for the conveyance of the fruit to the northern shores. Refrigerator steamers were built capable of handling 150,000 bunches of bananas and special provisions made for their care when on board. Nowadays in boats of 5,000 and 8,000 tons capacity the facilities for the care of the fruit are unrivaled, and a banana boat is unlike any other steamer in the holds. Instead of having a room for cargo there are partitions extending from the well of the ship to the deck. Along the beams in each compartment are hundreds of hooks. They are used to sling the bunches of bananas upon, for bananas should not be shipped with one bunch touching another.

The fruit is first picked green by the grovers and then brought to the steamer in boats. As each boatload is taken aboard the bunches are placed in the refrigerators and slung on the beams hooks a few inches apart. When every compartment is filled the steamer proceeds on her journey. To every fan compartment there is a man in charge whose duty it is to examine the bunches every day and see that they do not get overripe during the voyage. These men have an electric lamp, and, crouching on their hands and knees, they go from bunch to bunch, examining each carefully to see whether there are any signs of decay. Should a banana bunch show any tendency to become overripe it is at once taken down from its hook and brought up on deck to be "checked" by the ship's passenger.

Every fan compartment is made of the place where the bunch was hung and a detailed examination made of the bananas surrounding it, for one overripe bunch in the course of a single night is apt to contaminate others unless a careful watch is kept. The watch on the fruit is redoubled when the ship is nearing its destination, for by this time all the fruit has more or less ripened.

A MISFIT SERMON

From the Chicago Post

A popular Irishman, beloved for many a mile around his home town, died suddenly. He belonged to several organizations and the A. O. H. of Bloomville decided to send a representative to his funeral.

The church was packed and the clergyman most sympathetic in expressing his certainty of immortality went in for a little.

"We will," he observed in illustration, "that here is a beautiful watch. The case is gold and is studded with diamonds. It looks like the valuable part of the watch, but you can remove the works and they will keep on ticking."

The delegate returned to his home town and was sounded on the topic of the funeral sermon.

"Well," he reported, "the father said that Pat was no waterbury."

FIRST AID TO INJURED HEARTS

By Laura Jean Libbey

A Vacant Chair

(Copyright 1912, by Laura Jean Libbey.)

No matter how large a family or how closely they may be bound by ties of fondest love, they cannot hope that they will always be together. Many a mother wonders wistfully whose chair will be vacant first. She sighs and wishes that she might have her boys and girls with her for long years.

As long as she can keep them in children she feels that all is well. It is not until the tucks are let out of the girls' dresses and the boys don long trousers that the trouble begins to brew. The oldest boy says, as he arises from the breakfast table, "Don't wait dinner for me tonight, mother. I shall not be home early." But she takes notice that he does not mention where he is going. The family, as usual, gather round the board. His chair is vacant. Somehow, there is a cloud upon the brightness of the little group. The next is the daughter's turn to startle her.

She could not refuse to allow her to visit her chum for a few days. But, O, how lonely it seems to view her absent chair. Even the boys notice the loss of her winsome, girlish face across the table.

Next it was father's opportunity to absent himself from the table and to present a vacant chair. His rheumatism was so bad that he could not get up and move down stairs. They would have to do the best they could without him. Mother did her best to be cheerful, but the failure was noticeable. Every now and then they caught the suspicion of a tear in her eyes as her gaze fell on father's vacant chair.

The next member of the household who left a vacant chair at the table was dear patient mother. They never realized how precious she was to them and what life would mean to them without her until the sight of her vacant chair greeted their eyes. She'll be sitting there tomorrow, said father, trying to console them and uttering a prophecy he was far from feeling sure of. Every moment some question would arise which it seemed they must refer to mother. They could hardly keep their emotion in check as they looked, first at that vacant chair, then at each other. "One never misses mother till one sees her vacant chair," often a son, exclaims.

There comes a day to that little group when the realization falls with full force that mother will never again sit in that chair and smile upon them from across the table. The years will come and the years will go, but that chair will always be empty. Daughter's chair would be the next to be empty if it were not that she brought her new husband home with her, for she could not leave father lonely. Both brothers would soon be taking their leave for they must make home nests for brides.

While the family is all together, and while there is no vacant chair to remind them mutely of a loved and lost one, let there be no friction, no angry words for there will come a time when each chair, one by one will be vacant.

HENRIETTA CROSMAN
IN "THE REAL THING."
TOMORROW EVENING

Married women who are happy, war women who are unhappy, girls who are to be happy when they are married, girls who fear they may be married, if they marry, and girls who hope to get married—here's a play. Winning the six-day sock-race endurance contest may be all right in its way, but it's a poor way to get a husband's love. What man would give attention to a wife who is not to look upon and be proud of? Part of this all is in "The Real Thing," the play that Henrietta Crosman will present at the Opera House, Saturday next, April 27.

shall be done. The husband will always think he is getting the worst of it. So the wife—the really successful wife and mother—has to be a diplomat of the highest order. Now all women are not diplomats, and so there is unhappiness in some households. It is this question that "The Real Thing" takes up. The peacock is not often considered a wise bird, but in this comedy the peacock is the sister to the goose, and she is a widow who has studied the game. Miss Crosman plays the widow, and the play is said to be the best Miss Crosman has yet produced.

Surrounding Miss Crosman is the most wonderfully clever company, and the remarkable scenic accompaniments.

"The Real Thing," Which Will Be Seen at the Opera House, Saturday Next, April 27.

thing," the play that Henrietta Crosman will present at the Opera house, Saturday next, April 27. It is said that this play has caused more comment from women writers than any other play produced in 10 years. It's kind of advice Dorothy Dix might give you if you wrote to her and asked for a solution of the domestic problem that confronted you.

A woman has to divide herself between her husband and her children, and it is always a question how it that caused so much favorable comment during the New York run at the Maxine Elliott theater. The metropolitan critics, notably Alan Dale, Arton Davies and Charles Darton, were unanimous in praising not only the charming acting of Henrietta Crosman, but the sterling qualities of the play itself. The comedy deals with a new version of an old theme—marital discontent.

Farewell Reception Honor Dr. J. H. Franklin

The members and congregation of the First Baptist church will hold a reception in the social rooms this evening from 8 to 10 o'clock, in farewell compliment to the pastor, the Rev. James H. Franklin. There will be collections by the Sunday school of flowers and social numbers by a quartet composed of Mrs. Edward E. Yandretto, Miss Eleanor Thomas, Dr. Verne Stiles, Richarda and Joseph Scholter. Mrs. Tallaferrro and Miss Thomas will sing a duet. Chas. P. Bennett will deliver a farewell address. All friends of Mr. Franklin and the public generally will be welcome.

GIVE 'SONG RECITAL

A song recital by Mrs. Alma Vera, Dr. Laughlin, soprano, and Miss Gladys Chantry, mezzo, assisted by Miss Jessie Wharton and Miss Ethel Smith, pianists, was given last night in Perkins hall, under the auspices of the Colorado College School of Music. Miss Eleanor Thomas was the accompanist.

GETTING DAD MARRIED

AT THE MAJESTIC

Ellen's mother is dead and she is alone. Dad's housekeeper, who wants to marry Harry and succeed in the winning Dad's consent by promising to stay with him until he secures another housekeeper.

Applicants are tried, but they fail to please Dad, and Ellen has almost given the hope when she conceives the idea of getting Dad married, so that Harry's help they advertise for a wife. Out of a mass of letters they select five and ask them to call on Dad. Among the first four to call, there's a fat widow, a dead widow and two very possible old maids. Dad's feelings exhaust after the fourth one, but the next, a handsome girl, but to the next underlying all these visits, Dad is both ignorant and unsuspecting.

Finally, the fifth one rings the bell, and Dad escapes. Ellen cautiously peeks out of the window before she asks this last one in. Dad, in passing out the front way, sees the one in question, and he is impressed, for she is "some woman," a blonde widow, with "all the looks." Ellen admits her and Dad slips back in the house. Dad "falls" for the widow and Ellen and Harry marry. Dad gets married, also, so all's well that ends well. And don't forget today is Friday, and on this day we have the Animated weekly, "Gaumont," giving all the news of the day in pictures. They are current events of national and international importance, shown in pictures, so simple, so plain, that the smallest child can understand them.

There are three more reels of the best pictures made or shown anywhere, there's the best music, and the entire show is only 5 cents. Think of it, an hour and a half's good amusement for only 5 cents.

standing room only. Details of the vocal numbers and dancing will be given later.

Mr. Burns will spare no pains to insure the comfort and pleasure of every patron of the house. We are promised some great surprises, both in decorative effects and comforts. Those who have been privileged to see it have said that the rich decorative terra cotta frontage we all admire so greatly is but a poor forerunner of the beauties of the theater proper.

Colorado City DEPARTMENT

MANY SIGN PETITIONS FOR CHARTER ELECTION

A number of Colorado City citizens who favor a charter form of government, have offered to serve as commissioners without pay, should the people vote for the change. Postmaster Morgan said yesterday that he would serve the first term without remuneration.

It was reported last night that there are enough names already on the charter petitions to warrant their presentation to the council, and this will be done May 6. There is no active opposition to the proposition, and it is thought that three-fourths of the voters will sign the petitions.

Motherhood

The highest point of woman's happiness is reached only through motherhood, in the clasping of her child within her arms. Yet the mother-to-be is often fearful of nature's ordeal and shrinks from the suffering incident to its consummation. But for nature's life and discomforts nature provides remedies, and in Mother's Friend is to be found a medicine of great value to every expectant mother. It is an emulsion for external application, composed of ingredients which act with beneficial and soothing effect on those portions of the system involved. It is intended to prepare the system for the crisis, and thus relieve, in great part, the suffering through which the mother usually passes. The regular use of Mother's Friend will repay any mother in the comfort it affords before, and the helpful restoration to health and strength it brings about after baby comes.

TAFT AND ROOSEVELT

THREE illuminating studies of the personalities of and the relations between Taft and Roosevelt have recently appeared, in as many different magazines. "The Senator's Secretary" gives an account of the beginning of the breach between Taft and Roosevelt in The Saturday Evening Post for April 13; George Kibbe Turner and Arthur Wallace Dunn tell "Who's Behind Taft?" in the May McClure's; and William Allen White gives "A Statement of the Relations Between President Taft and His Friend Colonel Roosevelt" in The American Magazine for May. All of these articles make it clear why the Colonel's hat is in the ring and why machine men and special interests are such enthusiastic Taft supporters.

"The Senator's Secretary" says that the first rupture between the President and the Colonel occurred in December, 1908, over the appointment of an Attorney General by President-elect Taft. Mr. Roosevelt urged the appointment of Frank B. Kellogg for the cabinet position. The Colonel understood that his successor favored Mr. Kellogg's appointment. But the Colonel was informed later that Mr. Kellogg would not be appointed. And how did this information reach him? Through a friend of Kellogg to whom a senator had said: "Well, we've got it fixed so Kellogg won't be in Taft's Cabinet."

Mr. Taft confirmed the senator's statement. It was "fixed." The President-elect stated that he would not appoint Mr. Kellogg Attorney General. Why? Because Mr. Kellogg was conducting the Government's case against the Standard Oil Company and he, Mr. Taft, did not think it advisable to have in his Cabinet a man connected with a prosecution then in progress.

President Taft has the right to select as members of his Cabinet such men as he sees fit to select. Mr. Taft used that right. The President is not subject to criticism for refusing to carry out the recommendations of any person. Mr. Taft's obligation to Mr. Roosevelt is great. Mr. Taft is "President" Taft because of Mr. Roosevelt's backing. However, the obligation is entirely personal. Mr. Taft had the right, and used it, of rejecting Mr. Roosevelt's recommendations.

However, there is another point. Although Mr. Taft was justified in rejecting any or all of Mr. Roosevelt's recommendations, he was not justified in throwing overboard the Roosevelt policies. President Taft had subscribed to these policies. He was elected because he had promised to carry them out. President Taft is responsible to the people for the appointments that he has made. He has failed if he has not appointed men who will carry out the policies advocated by the party which elected him.

It is interesting to compare Kellogg, who was not appointed Attorney General, with Ballinger, who was appointed Secretary of the Interior. Kellogg was Government prosecutor in the Standard Oil case; Ballinger was attorney for the Cunningham interests which were attempting to secure title to Alaskan lands from the Department of the Interior. Mr. Taft evidently did not feel that Mr. Ballinger's connections would embarrass him, the President, in carrying out his policies; for Mr. Ballinger was appointed. Mr. Taft stated that Mr. Kellogg's connections would embarrass him, the President, in carrying out his policies; and Mr. Kellogg was not appointed. Far be it from us to say that it would not have been embarrassing to President Taft to have had Mr. Kellogg in his Cabinet during the past three years.

Mr. Taft is responsible for his Cabinet appointments. He has not appointed men who have sympathized with the policies that elected him. The President is accountable, not to Mr. Roosevelt, but to the rank and file of the Republican party. Wherever presidential preference primaries have been held the rank and file have expressed not been faithful to his promises. The reasons for President Taft's failure are to be found in his temperament. As a man's temperament is inherent and unchanging, so the reasons for Taft's failure in the past will cause him to fail in the future if he be re-elected Chief Executive.

William Allen White finds that the DISCINATION of Roosevelt's support of Taft was due to "the tendency of men to admire traits that they themselves do not possess." He finds the essential difference between the personalities of Roosevelt and Taft stated succinctly by President Taft. "My predecessor," said Mr. Taft in Collier's of March, 1909, "loves a life akin to that of the pioneer. He loves roughing it, and I don't."

It was temperament again. Mr. Taft's idea of "men of earnest enthusiastic interest in the public weal" was a cabinet of corporation lawyers whose whole professional careers had been employed fighting for private wealth, and his idea of congressional leadership was found in Cannon and Aldrich. "He loves roughing it, I don't" was written all over the new administration. And so when a public servant like Glavin or Pinchot appeared who had a message that required some roughing it to institute justice under the message, the messenger lost his head. It is the habit of the standard executive to chop off the heads of the bearers of unpleasant communications.

It is all a matter of temperament between the two. "The very mental attitude that kept Taft the lieutenant in constant amiable agreement with Roosevelt the superior, and fooled Roosevelt with the conviction that the agreement was fundamental and not the easiest way to do the day's work, makes it impossible for Taft to seek Roosevelt now—made it impossible for Taft ever to consult Roosevelt about anything."

William Allen White is correct. It is a matter of temperament. But there is something else; President Taft's whole environment, his family connections and his experience on the bench, unfit him for work against the special interests, unfit him for the work of a militant executive. One of Mr. Taft's brothers "was a highly successful corporation lawyer in New York; another had become a millionaire, with tremendous corporate investments, by marriage." In the savageness of current political speech the relationship has been crystallized in Washington by the characterization of Mr. Taft as "the little brother of the rich."

Turner and Dunn show, in detail, how Taft's judicial temperament has put him in the control of the reactionary forces in Congress. Roosevelt's motto had always been "Strike the first blow." Taft always worked on the principle of a sort of Golden Rule: "Never do anything to anybody until he first does something to you."

Within six months Senator Dooliver, the "insurgent" from Iowa, had given the definition of the new President which was later adapted to the whimsical characterization: "A large body, completely surrounded by men who know exactly what they want."

Naturally, day by day the influence of the constant pressure increased. More and more, both consciously and unconsciously, the Chief Executive—who is really at heart a judge, and no executive at all—has come under the direction of "the legislator who is not a legislator at all, but a wonderful executive."

When President Taft's failure to keep faith with the voters who elected him resulted in the defeat of 1910, Washington said: "Taft is the prize baby of Cincinnati, who was never spanked until he was fifty-two. He doesn't know what to make of it." But the defeat of the President's supporters in 1910, and the present opposition to Mr. Taft himself, has resulted in this: Mr. Taft has turned to machines and machine men everywhere in order to secure a re-nomination; he has used the power of federal patronage to secure his ends. "There is nothing sly about Mr. Taft; when he wants anything in politics, he reaches for it with the simple directness of a young boy." He directed his campaign along the old lines of the manipulation of patronage.

President Taft has become completely identified with the political powers that have always fought Theodore Roosevelt. His strength is not with the people but with the machine. His sinews of war are not public confidence and esteem, but patronage and corporation support. The forces now in conflict in the Republican party have been aligning for three years. Today the issues between those forces are, unmistakably clear-cut and fundamental. Compromise is not possible.

OPEN PARLIAMENT

THE SUNDAY CLOSING LAW.
To the Editor of The Gazette:
Will you permit a correction of the statement in Wednesday morning's Gazette which implies that the Sunday ordinance, proposed by the Ministerial Association forbids the delivery of milk on Sunday, or any labor?
The ordinance proposed by the Ministerial Association does not contemplate preventing the delivery of milk on Sunday, or of ice cream. While it provides for a rest day each week for the toiler, it does not forbid labor unless it disturbs a meeting, a private family or the public, and even then it allows liberal allowance of necessity.
A MEMBER OF THE COMMITTEE.
CORRECTION BY THE EDITOR.

The Glad Toiler

By WALT MASON
The man who really likes to labor, whatever the tool that he employs, the hammer, trowel, pen or saw, will find this life replete with joys. But sorrow looms up, grim and bulky, to him who holds that toil is woe, whose head is sore, whose face is sulky, whose feet are twelve degrees below. The willing worker doesn't languish among the wailing unemployed; his cottage doesn't reek with anguish, his larder knows no aching void. I hired a man to wash my surty which got all muddy in a ditch; he gave up all his time to worry over the mess of the idleness. He boomed away like some pipe organ, denouncing this and roasting that, and throwing things at J. Pierp Morgan and every other plutocrat. And so I fired him through the transom when he had labored for half a day, and hired Jim Briggs to wash my handkerchief and rid it of its shining speck of clay. With noble ire he never bristled, his soul with sorrow wasn't sour; he merely rustled round and whistled and cleaned the blamed ink in an hour. And old Jim Briggs is always busy, for men who want a useful hand just chase him round till they are dizzy, and hand him coin to beat the band.

CENTERSHOTS

By ED HOWE
When muskets take the place of oratory, revolution becomes serious.
For every promise, there comes a settlement day.
After we get what is coming to us from the railroads, let us go after what we should have had from them in the past. That would be more progress.
Employers say that when they get a really good man, they are not only compelled to pay him his wages, but are forced to go to the trouble of looking him up.
So many men are worthless that it is surprising that at least one does not realize this worthlessness; but such a thing never happened on the face of the earth.
After a girl has been engaged four or five years, there is something about her that reminds you of a married woman; she may not have her eyes entirely open, but she is beginning to see.
A man's estimate of his prospects or his popularity is as unreliable as a candidate's estimate of his majority a week before election.
Honestly, now, did you ever know a big-hearted man to talk away anything except smiles?
The talk goes with being a Republican, but I am a Republican, and get nothing out of it except the pleasure of abusing Democrats, and the excitement of occasionally changing masters.

THE DAILY CHAT
BY RUTH CAMERON
The benefit we receive must be rendered again, line for line, cent for cent, deed for deed, to somebody. Emerson.
"Why do you insist on paying Lucille for doing those dinner cards?" one woman questioned another. "It is good practice for her, and I'm sure she would be glad to do them for nothing."
"My dear," said the other woman, "if I pay Lucille to do those dinner cards, I'll be square with her, and I'll know just what they cost me. If I let her do them for nothing, I'll be under obligation to her and I shall not know how much they cost until I pay back that obligation. Let me tell you about the last time I allowed myself to be put under obligation. Last winter Mrs. Rand took care of the babies for me several times. She offered to do it, and said she loved to, but, of course, I felt under obligation to her. Well, in the spring, she told me that she was going to visit her, and that she was very anxious for her to have a good time, and could see I could entertain for her, so, of course, I felt in honor bound to do it. Ordinarily, I would have really liked to, but the children had just had the measles, and I had been up nights with them until I could hardly see for sleepiness; and the house was disgracefully dirty; and I was just breaking in a new maid; and Fred was having a fearful attack of hay fever; so, altogether, the party I gave for her was the worst nightmare I ever had asleep or awake. I made up my mind then and there that I'd never put myself under obligation to anyone again."

Does this point of view strike you as ungracious? The lady certainly did make some rather sweeping statements, but I think there is a good deal in her point of view, nevertheless.
With a serene sense of having gotten something for nothing, but one never gets something for nothing, even from one's friends. If you have done some favor for your friend, don't you feel at liberty to call upon him when you are in need of his particular kind of talent or ability, or anything else which he has? Well, then, don't forget that he will feel the same towards you in reversed circumstances.
I do not think it is necessary to go so far as to refuse to ever put one's self under obligation. That would be to nullify the interchange of talents and opportunities, which is one of the legitimate uses of friendship. But don't think you are getting something for nothing when you allow yourself to be put under obligation. Remember that you are really giving your note of hand to pay on demand, and be sure you are willing to honor that note before you give it.

More Than Half a Million Sold Year by the United States Geological Survey
On the topographic maps made by the United States Geological Survey the mountains, hills, valleys, canyons—all the features that make up the varied surface of the mapped area, are portrayed by means of contour lines. Each contour line represents a certain height above sea level—that is, it indicates a course or contour along which all points are at exactly the same altitude. As contours are continuous horizontal lines, they wind smoothly about smooth surfaces, recede into all re-entrant angles or ravines, and project in passing around spurs or promontories. Thus a person following the path indicated by a contour line, say the 1,000-foot contour, would go irregularly around hills and ridges, but would be at the same level, namely, at an altitude of 1,000 feet.
The contour lines on the maps are spaced to represent equal vertical intervals in altitude. The vertical interval between any two contours as represented on one map is the same, whether they lie along a cliff or on a gentle slope; but to attain a given height it is of course necessary to go farther on a gentle slope than on a steep slope, and therefore contours are far apart on gentle slopes and near together on steep ones. The spacing of the contour lines thus indicates the approximate grade of any slope.
A small contour interval is necessary to express the relief of a flat or gently undulating country; a steep or mountainous country can, as a rule, be adequately represented on the same scale by the use of a larger interval. The smallest interval used on the sheets of the geological survey is five feet. For regions like the Mississippi Delta, the Sacramento valley and the Elmal swamp, for great mountain masses, like those in Colorado and the high Sierra of California, the interval may be 100 or 300 feet, and for less rugged country contour intervals of 10, 20, 25 and 50 feet are used.
With a little practice in reading the contour lines the traveler finds the topographic maps of the geological survey a most exact picture of the country, enabling him to see at a glance the character of any particular area. That the maps are of popular utility is shown, for instance, by the fact that the survey sells thousands of them to automobilists every month. Last year's sales of these maps amounted to more than half a million.

SHIPPING BANANAS
Care Is Needed to Keep Them From Becoming Overripe
From the New York Sun.
Before the banana reaches the breakfast table or the hawk's van it may journey 2,000 miles and pass through half a dozen different hands. The consumer is generally critical and troubles not at all about how, when or where the banana came from so long as it is in good condition and to his liking.
The shipment of bananas 20 years ago was a problem the solution of which the consumer had to pay for, but now he reaps the profit of experience in transportation. Bananas shipped to America generally come from the West Indies, the Central America republics, Mexico or South America, and such great strides have been made in the methods used for their shipment that, as compared with the 50 per cent loss of 20 years ago from the time the fruit left the banana groves until it reached the consumer's table, the loss is now figured out at a half of 1 per cent in a special shipment.
With the growth of the banana traffic the banana boats came into being, and a special line of steamers runs to the South American ports solely for the conveyance of the fruit to the northern shores. Refrigerator steamers were built capable of handling 150,000 bunches of bananas and special provisions made for their care when on board. Nowadays in boats of 5,000 and 6,000 tons capacity the facilities for the care of the fruit are unrivaled, and a banana boat is unlike any other steamer. In the holds, instead of having rooms for cargo there are partitions extending from the well of the ship to the deck. Along the beams in each compartment are hundreds of hooks. They are used to sling the bunches of bananas upon, for bananas should not be shipped with one bunch touching another.
The fruit is first picked green by the growers and then brought to the steamer in boats. As each boatload is taken aboard the bunches are placed in the refrigerators and slung on the beam hooks a few inches apart. When every compartment is filled the steamer proceeds on her journey. To every few compartments there is a man in charge whose duty it is to examine the bunches every day and see that they do not get overripe during the voyage.
These men have an electric lamp, and, crouching on their hands and knees, they go from bunch to bunch, examining each carefully to see whether there are any signs of decay. Should a banana bunch show any tendency to become overripe it is at once taken down from its hook and brought out on deck to be consumed by the ship's passengers or crew or else flung overboard. Careful note is made of the place where the bunch was hung and a detailed examination made of the banana in the course of a single night is apt to contaminate others unless a careful watch is kept. The watch on the fruit is redoubled when the ship is nearing its destination, for by this time all the fruit has more or less ripened.

A MISFIT SERMON
From the Chicago Post.
A popular Irishman, beloved for many a mile around his home town, died suddenly. He belonged to several organizations and the A. O. U. of Bloomville decided to send a representative to his funeral.
The church was packed and the clergyman most sympathetic. In expressing his certainty of immortality he went in for a smile.
"We will say," he observed in illustration, "that here is a beautiful watch. The case is gold and is studded with diamonds. It looks like the valuable part of the watch, but you can remove the works and they will keep on ticking."
The delegate returned to his home town and was drowned on the trip of the funeral sermon.
"Well," he reported, "the father said that Pat was no waterbury."

FIRST AID TO INJURED HEARTS
By Laura Jean Libbey

A Vacant Chair

(Copyright 1912, by Laura Jean Libbey.)

No matter how large a family of how closely they may be bound by ties of fondest love, they cannot hope that they will always be together. Many a mother wanders wistfully whose chair will be vacant first. She sighs and wishes that she might have her boys and girls with her for long years.
As long as she can keep them, children she feels that all is well. It is not until the ticks are laid out for the girls' dresses and the boys don long trousers that the trouble begins to brew. The oldest boy says, as he arises from the breakfast table, "Don't wait dinner for me tonight, mother. I shall not be home early." But she takes notice that he does not mention where he is going. The family, as usual, gather round the board. His chair is vacant. Somehow, there is a cloud upon the brightness of the little group. The next is the daughter's turn to startle her.
She could not refuse to allow her to visit her chum for a few days. But, O, how lonely it seems to view her vacant chair. Even the boys notice the loss of her winsome, girlish face across the table.
Next it was father's opportunity to absent himself from the table and to present a vacant chair. His rheumatism was bad that he could not get up and move down stairs. They would have to do the best they could without him. Mother did her best to be cheerful, but the failure was noticeable. Every now and then they caught the suspicion of a tear in her eyes as her gaze fell on father's vacant chair.
"The next member of the household who left a vacant chair at the table was dear, patient mother. They never realized how precious she was to them until what life would mean to them without her until the sight of her vacant chair greeted their eyes. She'll be sitting there tomorrow," said father, trying to console them, and uttering a prophecy he was far from feeling sure of. Every moment some question would arise which it seemed they could hardly keep their emotion in check as they looked, first at that vacant chair, then at each other. "One never misses mother till one sees her vacant chair," sighs a son, gloomily.
Under a cloud of day that little group when the realization falls with full force that mother will never again fill in that chair and smile upon them from across the table. The years will come and the years will go, but that chair will always be empty. Daughter's chair would be the next to be empty if it were not that she brought her new husband home with her, for she could not leave father lonely. Both brothers would soon be taking their leave, for they must make home nests for brides.
While the family is all together, and while there is no vacant chair to remind them mutely of a loved and lost one, let there be no friction, no angry words, for there will come a time when each chair, one by one, will be vacant.

THEY WERE ENGAGED
"Dear Miss Libbey: I am 27 and have been in love with a young man four years older. He comes to see me regularly Wednesday and Sunday. I've also been engaged, and he broke the engagement. I was true to him, but he was not to me. For I'm living in a little burg. And now he's engaged to another girl, right after he left me. Now, would you give me your idea what you think of him? Did he ever love me, or would I ever have been happy?" J. H. S.
He is a flake creature, and you are fortunate, indeed, to be well rid of him.
